Glimpse into the briefest of updates

The redo of my parathyroid hormone level came back on Friday super low again. However, the other levels that usually are effected with this problem were not as out of whack as you might expect. So today, after advice from my specialist, I had more bloods taken, and will test my parathyroid level again…third time is a charm! I have even stumped the endocrinologist specialist! More waiting…more tests…more unknowns…
On the upside, the test for arthritis of the spine came back negative, so that is a win right there.

